Arbor Day day of trees

6 June 2003

The largest tree of the Swan

Coastal Plain – from Jurien to near Busselton – tuart supports many insects, birds and other animals. Its elegant habit is adapted to the salt winds of its near-coastal habitat. But tuart woodlands are under pressure in some parts of the Plain from clearing or ecological changes.

The Department of Conservation and Land Management is leading a Tuart Response Group aimed at developing partnerships between Government and community groups for the conservation and management of tuarts so that people can continue to enjoy these remarkable ecosystems.
