SUMMARY

As part of the 2000/01 Marine Conservation Branch (MCB) project titled: Establishment of an oceanographic monitoring network in marine reserves - Stage 1, a water temperature monitoring site was established at Tantabiddi, Ningaloo Marine Park on 28th July 2000. Two water temperature loggers were deployed on this date and collected water temperature data up to their retrieval on 28th December 2000. This report presents the data collected by these two loggers.

This project was coordinated by the Marine Conservation Branch (MCB) of the Department of Conservation and Land Management (CALM) and conducted in collaboration with CALM's Exmouth District office.

The objective of this project is to collect water temperature data over long time scales, as relevant to the management of Ningaloo Marine Park. These data will be used of use in assessing the most appropriate method for long-term monitoring of ocean temperatures in tropical marine reserves. The logger data can be compared to sea surface temperature (SST) measurements of the adjacent oceanic zone acquired by satellite based sensors. The two data sets can then be examined for any correlation, as part of a future CALM study titled: Development of an ocean temperature monitoring capability in existing tropical marine reserves – Stage 2. An assessment of the suitability of using satellite based SST measurements, as an indicator of lagoonal water temperatures in the marine park is a key requirement for management of Western Australia's marine protected areas.

This project comprises part of the development of a statewide ocean temperature monitoring capability in Western Australia's marine conservation reserves, required by CALM for the characterisation and modelling of key ecological processes and for the on-going management of these areas.

1 INTRODUCTION

This report presents the data recorded by water temperature loggers that were deployed at Tantabiddi, Ningaloo Marine Park on 28th July 2000 and retrieved on 28th December 2000. The Marine Conservation Branch (MCB) of the Department of Conservation and Land Management (CALM) undertook this project in collaboration with CALM's Exmouth District office.

1.1 GENERAL BACKGROUND

Ningaloo Reef is a fringing barrier coral reef enclosing a series of shallow lagoons, situated on the western side of the Cape Range peninsula (Figure 1). In order to protect the important ecological and socio-economic values of the coral reef system, the area was reserved as a marine park in 1987 (CALM, 1989). The Ningaloo Marine Park Management Plan (CALM, 1989) was developed to assist in managing the park. Many of the management strategies identified in the management plan can only be achieved with a comprehensive knowledge of the physical environment within the marine park.

This project was established to collect water temperature data over long time scales, as relevant to the management of Ningaloo Marine Park. These data will be of use in assessing the most appropriate method for long-term monitoring of ocean temperatures in tropical marine reserves. The logger data can be compared to sea surface temperature (SST) measurements of the adjacent oceanic zone acquired by satellite based sensors. The two data sets can then be examined for any correlation, as part of a future CALM study titled: Development of an ocean temperature monitoring capability in existing tropical marine reserves – Stage 2. An assessment of the suitability of using satellite based SST measurements, as an indicator of lagoonal water temperatures in the marine park is a key requirement for management of Western Australia's marine protected areas.

This project comprises part of the development of a statewide ocean temperature monitoring capability in Western Australia's marine conservation reserves, required by CALM for the characterisation and modelling of key ecological processes and for the on-going management of these areas.

2 PURPOSE

The purpose of this report is to:

- (i) provide information, in the form of tables and time series graphs, of the water temperature variation at Tantabiddi, Ningaloo Marine Park, between 28th July and 28th December 2000;
- (ii) document the calibration of temperature loggers after their retrieval, and;
- (iii) document amendments to the raw data.

3 STUDY AREA

The study site for this project is Tantabiddi, which lies within Ningaloo Marine Park, about 1200 km north of Perth, Western Australia. The area of Ningaloo Marine Park is broadly described as the State Territorial Waters from Bundegi Reef, 5 km north of Exmouth, to Amherst Point (Figure 1).

3.1 SITE SELECTION

One site (NO1) was established using the existing CALM mooring at Tantabiddi (Figure 2). The loggers were positioned on the anchor (large metal wheel) of this mooring, approximately 20 cm above the seabed. At the time of deployment the water depth was approximately 3 m (water depth changes with tide). The site coordinates are 21°54.7086'S, 113°58.4124'E (as recorded using a Garmin 12 GPS, datum WGS 84, ± 10 m).

This site was selected to assist in characterising the annual temperature extremes of the lagoonal areas north of Point Cloates. It is expected that the largest temperature variations in Ningaloo Marine Park will occur within the lagoons. Recent studies suggest that the physical presence of Point Cloates provides a latitudinal transition in the general features of the oceanic hydrodynamics of Ningaloo Reef (D'Adamo and Simpson, 2001) and this further motivated the positioning of the loggers to the north of Point Cloates.

Another site was established in Bills Bay (south of Point Cloates) on 3rd January 2001, as part of the field deployment phase of this project, however the data are yet to be retrieved and as such will be presented in a future data report.

4 METHODS

4.1 SAMPLING METHODS

Methods relating to pre-deployment calibration and initialisation, deployment and retrieval of the loggers at Ningaloo Marine Park are described in the relevant field programme report (D'Adamo and Davidson, 2001).

StowAway Tidbit temperature loggers (Onset Computer Corporation; www.onset.com) were used to record water temperature at pre-specified time intervals. The loggers were set to record instantaneous temperature data at 30 minute intervals.

The two loggers were secured to the base of the existing CALM mooring, using plastic electrical ties. The height of the loggers was therefore maintained at approximately 20 cm above the seabed for the entire data collection period. An opportunistic inspection of the loggers by Judith Davidson (Marine Conservation Officer, CALM) on 20th February 2001 found the loggers and mooring to be fixed securely.

4.2 CALIBRATION

4.2.1 Pre-deployment calibration

StowAway Tidbit temperature loggers have an accuracy of ± 0.2 °C and must be calibrated against a thermometer, or any other temperature recorder with an accuracy much better than ± 0.2 °C, prior to all field deployments. For this deployment, calibration was performed using a scientific mercury thermometer (accuracy of ± 0.05 °C). The procedure for calibration was as follows:

- (i) Temperature loggers were initialised to record instantaneous temperature data at 30 second intervals;
- (ii) The air temperature and time were recorded using a mercury thermometer and stop watch;
- (iii) The loggers were placed in a bucket of water for approximately 5 minutes;
- (iv) The water temperature and time were recorded every 1 minute, using the mercury thermometer and stop watch;
- (v) The loggers were taken out of the water and dried;
- (vi) The air temperature and time were recorded every 1 minute for approximately 5 minutes;
- (vii) The information was downloaded from the loggers to ensure that the difference between the logger and thermometer water temperature readings was not greater than ± 0.2 °C.

This calibration information has been recorded in the Marine Conservation Branch official file, number 1997F001167.

4.2.2 Post-retrieval calibration

A post-retrieval calibration was performed to ensure that the loggers retained an accuracy of ± 0.2 °C. This calibration was carried out using the same procedure as the pre-deployment calibration. The results of the post-retrieval calibration showed that the loggers were still recording at an accuracy of ± 0.2 °C.

4.3 AMENDMENTS TO DATA

StowAway Tidbit loggers have a susceptibility to temperature drift when immersed in water for a continuous period of eight weeks or more at temperatures above 30 °C (Onset Computer Corporation, 1999). The only way to avoid this would be to waterproof the loggers, for example, by deploying them within waterproof containers. However, the absence of suitable containers (in respect of thermal lag response times between the outside water and inner air of the container) resulted in deployment without the protection of waterproof containers in this instance. The likelihood of temperatures in excess of 30 °C for eight weeks or more is however small at Tantabiddi, Ningaloo Marine Park (D'Adamo and Simpson, 2001). The data retrieved from the temperature loggers were checked and it was found that the loggers did not record water temperatures above 30 °C during the deployment period.

During an initial data check it was discovered that the deployment and retrieval times recorded by the loggers were not the same as those recorded by the field officers, the loggers were exactly 12 hrs slow. Adding 12 hrs to all of the times recorded by the loggers rectified this inaccuracy.

The data were also checked for 'electrical spikes'. An electrical spike is an erroneous reading that appears as a spike in the time series graph. There were no electrical spikes found in the data.

The amended data are presented as Appendix I and II, for loggers 1 (serial number 299272) and 2 (serial number 298878), respectively.

5 RESULTS

The amended data were plotted as time series graphs (Figure 3 – 8). Figure 3 presents the data recorded by both loggers from deployment to retrieval. It is interesting to note that logger 2 (serial number 298878) was recording consistently higher (typically 0.05 to 0.25 °C higher) water temperatures than logger 1 (serial number 299272). There were 43 recorded instances where the difference between the recorded temperatures of the two loggers was larger than the allowable ± 0.4 °C. Most of these instances occurred during November and December (15 and 24 instances respectively), where the difference ranged from 0.41 to 0.44 °C (Figure 7 and 8). As the error only exceeds the maximum allowable (± 0.4 °C) by a relatively small amount (0.01 – 0.04 °C), these data points have been left in the time series and have been highlighted in Appendix I and II (instances shown in ‘bold font’).

Other notable results in the data include:

- The highest recorded water temperature was 29.74 °C, which was recorded by logger 1 at 5:09 PM, 5:39 PM and 6:09 PM on 25th December.
- The lowest recorded water temperature was 17.24 °C, which was recorded by logger 2 at 9:40 AM, 10:10 AM and 11:40 AM on 10th August.
- There was a gradual trend of increasing water temperature in the data over the 5 months from deployment to retrieval.
- There were notable occurrences of relatively rapid changes in water temperature, where the temperature changed by up to 7 °C over periods of as little as 2 days (see the following dates, for example, 1st to 8th September, 6th to 13th October, and 20th to 27th December).
