They honey possums are still common in hundreds of the south west... but for how much longer? They rely on a range of flowering plants for a year-round supply of nectar and pollen... the very same plants that are threatened by the killer slash fires.
