

Carnaby's Black-Cockatoo
—where to from here?

Carnaby's Black-Cockatoo Symposium

Allan Burbidge
David Mitchell
Michael Roache

Department of Environment and Conservation
Our Environment, our Future

Birds Australia

Threatened Species Network
WWF

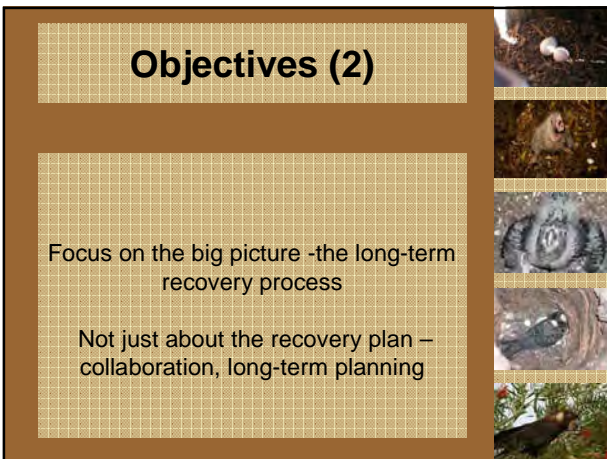

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos and a tree on the left side.

Objectives (1)

- Promote collaboration and information sharing
- Identify key recovery issues for the future
- Set priorities for research and management

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos on the right side.

Objectives (2)

Focus on the big picture -the long-term recovery process

Not just about the recovery plan – collaboration, long-term planning

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos on the right side.

Structure

Symposium

- threat ranking,
- framework of recovery actions

Please add your thoughts – spoken or written

Workshop - prioritisation

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos on the right side.

Approach

We don't just want to hear about what you've done.

We need statements about

- what didn't work,
- what you might do differently,
- what are the challenges,
- what are the opportunities (even 10-20 years from now)

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos on the right side.

Approach (2)

We hope that you will

- speak with impunity,
- positively and constructively and
- with honest criticism

We ask you to engage with the issues, and challenge assumptions: yours and ours

The slide features a grid background with images of cockatoos on the right side.

Approach (3)

Make use of morning tea and lunch to catch up on missed questions.... develop new contacts .....

Please forgive the logistics – challenge to organise for this many people

Outcomes

Clearer understanding of the issues and challenges ahead

Visionary ideas for sustainable recovery of the cockatoos

More collaborative partnerships between stakeholders

A strategic framework for the recovery of the species

By working together, we can achieve this

Carnaby's Black-Cockatoo Symposium

 Allan Burbidge
 David Mitchell
 Michael Roache

 Department of Environment and Conservation
Our environment, our future

 Birds Australia

 International Species Network

 WWF

