Building the Trail

The Munda Bididi Trail is being built under a partnership between the Department of Conservation and Land Management (CALM) and a number of other State Government departments, local governments, businesses and the community. The Trail will be constructed in stages, with completion to Albany expected in a few years.

The Munda Bididi Trail Foundation is a not-for-profit organisation that assists with planning, developing, marketing and maintaining the Trail. The organisation enlists paid memberships, enrolls and manages volunteers, holds trail and community events, and provides information and resources to enhance the quality of the Munda Bididi experience.

For more information, including current trail conditions and construction progress, contact CALM's Tracks and Trails Unit or the Munda Bididi Trail Foundation.

A forest cycling adventure

Experience the bush on a bicycle

The Munda Biddi Trail (which means path through the forest in the Nyoongar Aboriginal language) is the latest addition to Western Australia's growing set of world-class recreational trails. Vast areas of majestic eucalypt forests, rolling hills, and year-round cycling weather make Western Australia the ideal setting for a long distance off-road cycle trail.

Starting in Mundaring in the hills east of Perth, the trail meanders through scenic river valleys and the magnificent eucalypt forests of Western Australia's South West.

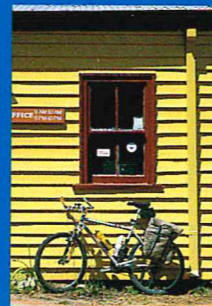

Something for everyone

The Munda Biddi Trail has been designed for cyclists of all ages and experience levels. Enjoy a peaceful morning ride or challenge yourself to a week-long wilderness adventure. Many vehicle access points allow you to design your own journey.

The Trail uses a network of bush tracks, firebreaks and disused railway formations, so most of your trip will be on gentle grades except where you enter and exit the scenic river valleys.

If you're keen on an extended off-road adventure, you can camp in purpose-built Munda Biddi campsites. Situated a comfortable day's ride apart, the camps have roomy sleeping shelters and tent sites. Or if a hot shower and a comfortable bed tempt you at the end of your ride, the Trail passes through a town at least every second day, ensuring easy re-supply and a range of accommodation choices.

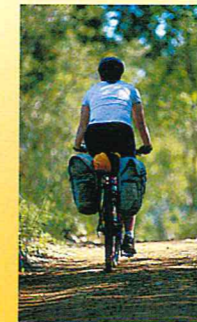

Cycle through nature

On the Munda Biddi Trail you will encounter wildlife and plants not found anywhere else in the world. In the northern section, the trail passes through jarrah forest that is home to the western brush wallaby, brushtail possum and the western grey kangaroo.

Further south, the Trail will pass through towering karri and tingle forests before it ends in the coastal town of Albany on the dramatic Southern Ocean. Relax and enjoy the scenery while you cycle through nature.

The Munda Biddi Trail provides an ideal opportunity to keep fit and have fun while refreshing your spirit as you soak up the beauty and peace of the South West forests.

Become a friend of the Trail

Members of the Munda Biddi Trail Foundation receive quarterly newsletters and other periodic updates to stay informed about the progress of the Trail's construction and events. Members also receive discounts on Munda Biddi merchandise from the Foundation and affiliated retail shops.
