

Maps to point the way

by David Gough

THE official launch of the StreetSmart Blackwood Valley Touring Map took place on Tuesday 11 June at the offices of the Department of Land Administration (DOLA), in Perth.

The publication of this new map heralds the formalisation of DOLA and CALM's working relationship and reflects a combined commitment to conservation awareness.

Its production also represents close collaboration between Government and community-based tourist groups.

DOLA's Chief Executive, Allan Skinner, praised the level of professionalism and commitment by both departments in formalising a solid working relationship.

"Although DOLA and CALM have in the past acted as sister agencies pursuing similar interests, this is the first time the association has been formally recognised by management," he said.

"It is envisaged that DOLA and CALM will maintain this mood of professional cooperation, by continuing to work on similar projects."

CALM's General Manager, Roger Underwood, stressed the fact that the Blackwood Valley map is unique in that it highlights existing or proposed conservation areas, forest estates and disease risk areas.

Prior to this publication, touring maps had only indicated official national parkland.

"This is timely since CALM is working hard to promote a dieback public awareness program with Rotary clubs in the South West," he said.

Work is already under way to co-produce another touring map, this time of the Pilbara region.
