

Rabbit control - permanent bait stations

Summer is a good time to put big effort into rabbit control. One-shot oats works well, but if used within bushland it can be inefficient and lead to an increase in weeds. Steve Newbey of Ongerup has designed a permanent bait station that has been very effective. Why not try it?

Use 200 litre drums cut in half. Put an old tin mug full of oats underneath the drums every month or so. Place close to a known rabbit use area. Dig a rabbit run into the entrance to encourage its use.

(Nb: ensure that your permit covers all the months you intend to bait.)
