

BOODIES IN THE RANGELANDS

GORDON WYRE, CALM's A/ Director Nature Conservation, was recently inspecting additions to the Kennedy Range National Park, in the Gascoyne, when he noticed signs of Boodies and sent us a pic. In the pastoral area, Boodies burrowed down below the calcrete layer, thus keeping themselves cool and conserving moisture during the summer. Of course, there are no Boodies left there now, but perhaps, in the future ...?

(Ref: "Relict Bettong Warrens in Western Australia's Pastoral Land" WW 5/1)